Housing Support is a program for people with disabilities and older adults who have low income. It helps pay for housing and things people need to stay housed in certain group settings or in the community.

Housing Support may also help pay for other services to help people with stable housing, employment, or health needs they may have.

Working while getting Housing Support may increase your income.

For accessible formats of this publication and additional equal access to human services, write to dhs.adultincomesupport@state.mn.us, call 651-431-3300, or use your preferred relay service.
When you receive Housing Support and don’t work you only get to keep a personal needs allowance, which is $111 per month.

But if you work, you can keep more of your income to pay for things you want and need.

You pay your provider or landlord a portion of your income towards your housing.

But even paying this, you have more money at the end of the month than if you were not working.
